

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 3, 1877. It is a formal communication, and it is written in a very formal and dignified style. The President begins by addressing the Congress, and then he proceeds to discuss the state of the Union. He mentions the progress of the country, and he expresses his confidence in the future. He also mentions the death of General Grant, and he expresses his sympathy for the family. The letter is a very important document, and it is a very good example of the style of the President's communications.
