

It is a very common thing to find a person who is very intelligent and who is very capable of doing a great deal of work, but who is not very happy. This is because he is not in touch with his own feelings. He is not aware of what he really wants and he is not willing to go after it. He is content to live a life of mediocrity and to let the world pass by him without making any impression. He is not a man of action, but a man of words. He talks a great deal, but he does not do anything. He is a dreamer, not a doer. He is a man who is not in touch with his own feelings and who is not willing to go after what he really wants.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE FEELINGS

The feelings are the most important part of a person's life. They are the source of all our energy and all our power. They are the source of all our joy and all our sorrow. They are the source of all our love and all our hate. They are the source of all our life and all our death. They are the source of all our being and all our non-being. They are the source of all our knowledge and all our wisdom. They are the source of all our truth and all our falsehood. They are the source of all our good and all our evil. They are the source of all our life and all our death. They are the source of all our being and all our non-being. They are the source of all our knowledge and all our wisdom. They are the source of all our truth and all our falsehood. They are the source of all our good and all our evil.
