Zablocki Asks For Action To Combat Alewife Problem

WASHINGTON (Sp.) — Rep. Clement J. Zablocki (Dem., Wis.) said today he has written Chairman Edward A. Garmatz of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee urging speedy and favorable action on his bill to combat the alewife problem.

Zablocki has led the fight in Congress for more federal action against the species which has been piled deep on beaches along Lakes Michigan and Ontario this summer, causing pollution, odor and health problems for areas of Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and New York.

In his letter to Chairman Garmatz, the Wisconsin congressman said: "The prospect for the future is, frankly, grim. Unless a concerted effort is begun now, we can expect similar inundations every summer for years to come."

ZABLOCKI ESTIMATED that the cost of this summer's alewife die-off must be counted in the millions of dollars. He said states, communities, and private property owners have been forced to take drastic and costly steps to remove the fish. "Despite these drastic expenses, such emergency efforts do not in any way cope with the basic problem," he noted.

"I firmly believe that a sufficient amount of money, spent at the right place and time, can save our communities tens of millions in future cleanup costs," said the congressman.

He urged the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee chairman to schedule hearings as soon as possible on his alewife control bill. That legislation, H.R. 4793, would provide up to $5 million in matching federal funds to states, acting either individually or in an interstate compact, for research and action programs to control the alewife population. Identical or similar bills have recently been introduced in both the House and Senate.

IN A STATEMENT accompanying the text of his letter to Chairman Garmatz, Zablocki was critical of inaction by the Department of the Interior on the alewife problem.

"In August 1966 I received a letter from Secretary of Interior Udall acknowledging that the alewife had the upper hand in the Great Lakes and that a "sustained and massive effort was necessary to bring it under control," he noted.

"In ensuing months, however, nothing has been done by Interior. The level of department expenditures on the problem, which have been about $200,000 annually, were not increased in spite of the fact that a 1966 Bureau of Commercial Fisheries report had pinpointed several avenues of approach which called for increased budget levels."

Zablocki said he believes that a solution to the alewife problem requires a coordinated effort among the federal government and the states and localities affected.

HE POINTED OUT that last September, in water pollution hearings by a Congressional committee in Milwaukee, he had proposed a five-point plan for alewife control. This program would entail:

First, intensified study of the alewife life cycle to find the weak spots which may make ecological control possible;

Second, expanded research on the effect of the alewife on other, more desirable fish species, such as lake trout, whitefish and coho salmon;

Third, increased experimentation with devices which can discourage the alewife from spawning and dying in rivers and harbors in urban areas and from congregating around water intakes;

Fourth, efforts to encourage increased commercial use of the alewife for the manufacture of fish meal, fish flour and other related products;

And fifth, financial assistance to Great Lakes fishermen who are willing to equip their boats with rigging suitable for harvesting the alewife.

"I still believe that all these methods must be part of a balanced anti-alewife program," Zablocki said. "To them, I would today add an action program of stocking predator fish which can use the alewife for forage."

Urges Long Range Corporate Planning

Toronto. (UPI) — Long range facility planning by industry is necessary because of a rapid rise in new plant and equipment investments. Carl J. Kiefer, facilities and industrial engineering official of North American Aviation, told the annual convention of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers.

Kiefer said more than $64 billion will be invested in 1967 for new plant and equipment requirements and that by 1967 this capital investment is expected to exceed $100 billion annually. "Without long range planning, management's attainment of company goals and even its future is left partially to chance," he said.

Punk Handling Of Picnic Food Means Disaster

Washington (UPI) — Poor preparation and handling of foods can turn a family outing into a "no picnic," warns the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The department lists six rules for preparing picnic fare to limit the possibilities of food-poisoning: They are:

- Be certain all utensils and equipment used are clean.
- Wash hands thoroughly before beginning preparation.
- Cook food thoroughly. Pork should be cooked at 150 degrees and poultry at 165 degrees.
- Don't allow food to stand at room temperature. Keep cold foods below 45 degrees, hot items at over 140 degrees. Temperatures between 45 and 140 degrees are optimum for bacteria growth, especially in high protein, high moisture foods such as milk products, cream foods and meat.
- Keep preparation time to a minimum and foods at safe temperatures during transportation. Don't serve picnic foods at a second meal if they have been left at room temperature for long.
- Do not refrigerate in deep containers. Food acts as an insulator so the inside of a sandwich could be warm although the outside is frozen. Use shallow pans to cool foods so that the item can be surrounded by ice.
- If you do not have the facilities to keep food hot or cold, don't take such foods with you. It is better to give up a picnic treat than suffer later illness.

Destruction Of Catholic Church In The Ukraine Is Deplored By Bishops

Rome. (Sp.)—Marking the 20th anniversary of the subjugation of the Catholic Church in the Ukraine to the Moscow Orthodox Patriarchate, Archbishop Joseph Cardinal Slipy and 16 other Catholic Bishops of the Ukraine now living in the free world, issued a pastoral statement which reads in part:

THE PRESS and the radio recently announced the news of celebrations in Ukraine marking the 20th anniversary of the annihilation of the Ukrainian Catholic Church (which since the time of the Austrian rule has been called Greek-Catholic), that took place in the Ukraine in 1946, and her subordination to the Moscow patriarchate. Radio programs, various reports in the press, speeches and concerts, as well as liturgical services and patriarchal letters were to give the anniversary, along with the external apparatus, a one-sided meaning, and at the same time avert attention from true reality.

THE INCORPORATION of our Church to the Moscow Patriarchate at the so-called "Council of the Greek-Catholic Church" in Lwow on March 8-9, 1946, took place at a time when all our bishops: Metropolitan Joseph (Slipy - Kobernetsky - Dychkovsky), Bishop Josaphat (Kotselovsky), Bishop Gregory (Chomyshyn), Bishop Nicholas (Charmetsky), Bishop Nykyta (Budka), Bishop Gregory (Lakota), Bishop John (Lyatyshevsky), Apostolic Administrator Rev. Msgr. Peter (Berhun) already were arrested and suffered in prisons or in exile, sentenced to hard labor along with hundreds of priests and thousands of faithful in Siberia, the Far East, North Pole, Kazakhstan, and Mongolia, where many of them gave their lives for the faith. Therefore, one cannot consider the incorporation of our Catholic Church in the Ukraine to the Moscow Patriarchate as the voluntary decision of the majority of the Ukrainian Catholic clergy and nation. Finally, we are aware of the words of the Holy Father, Pius XII, in the encyclical "Orientalis Omnes" of Dec. 23, 1948.

"The Council of the Greek-Catholic Church in Lwow, March 8, 1946, bears no canonical power, because no canonically appointed bishop took part in it; it is known that a Council without the participation of bishops does not have legislative power. Two bishops, present there, were fallen away members of the Catholic priesthood, that had joined the Orthodox and just were consecrated by Orthodox bishops. At the meeting of that Council there were no discussions and the threat of arrest and deportation awaited anyone who protested the unification."

THE SO CALLED "initiatory group" was not at all numerous and represented neither the majority of the clergy nor of the Ukrainian Catholic. The masses and in its heart the nation remained faithful to the Catholic Church and did not accept the erroneous step of the minority of the terrorized adherents of the incorporation of the Ukrainian Catholic Church in the Moscow Patriarchate.

The awareness of the unity of faith and the fervent desire to unite with the Catholic Church always shone on the historical horizon of Ukrainian Christianity, from its beginnings until the present day, as is witnessed by the living ecumenical movement and unextinguishable striving of all the faithful to unite with the one Church of Christ. The Union preserved the unity with the Catholic Church for us and gives evidence of the loyalty to the Chair of St. Peter in the most trying times of our history.

WHEN WITH DEEP anguish we find it necessary to call the attention of public opinion to that which today causes us to suffer, we only wish one thing: THAT THE LIBERTY FOR PEACEFUL EXISTENCE WOULD BE RESTORED TO OUR CATHOLIC CHURCH IN UKRAINE. — We want to lie in unity with the Apostolic See of Rome and we wish to create mutual goodwill and respect with our Orthodox brethren who, like we, believe in Jesus Christ and love Him, and we hope with God's help to promote a fruitful dialogue with them so that we may reach at last the long-awaited moment of the restoration of unity in the one Church of Christ.

TIMELY TOPICS SECURITY

By HELEN D. BIELAKIEWICZ

Is there a basic principle of psychology which governs the behavior of all animal life? — Knowing as little as I do about this subject, and supposing that my idea has not been advanced previously by Freud or an equally great man of the mind, I advance the theory that every animal spends its entire life in the struggle to obtain and maintain a measure of security.

Using man as my guinea pig, allow me to focus your attention on a basic occupation of this and all other creatures: the procurement of food. Man's quest for food has caused countless migrations over the eons of his existence on this period. The Indians of the Great American Desert are famous for treks in pursuit of the great buffalo herds which provided their food and shelter. Those other Americans who threatened the abundance of this necessity to Indian survival encroached on the red man's domain in most cases to obtain sole possession of the land they hoped would nourish their crops and whose abundance of plant life they required for the feeding of a different kind of herd animal: cattle. These new inhabitants sought not to harass the Indians and to destroy their security but rather to seek security for themselves. Look at any profession which takes some sort of specialized training. In each, people have worked to prepare themselves for the future so that they might be able to gain a measure of security in being able to earn a living.

THERE IS MORE to man's life than eating, however, and more that must be discussed to support this theory. Let us turn on man's social life. Most people admit that having friends is important. But what are friends? They can be put into two categories: companions and allies. Companions make one feel secure in the knowledge that he is accepted by a group. An ally, on the other hand, offers security in knowing that he is around and willing to help if his services are required. This friendship has its place in married life also. When a man marries, he chooses his mate not only as a lover, but also as a companion, a housekeeper, and a confidant, who will faithfully and sympathetically listen to his problems instead of laughing at his mistakes. A woman, on the other hand, chooses her mate as a provider as well as a lover. She seeks security in a guaranteed paycheck as well as in the knowledge that she is wanted. It is not to be said, however, that my theory includes a passage stating that one must strive only for his own security. A husband gains a measure of it in the knowledge that his family is secure from want. His wife is secure in as simple a thing as knowing that she is providing her husband and children with all the nourishment they need by well balanced meals.

NO MATTER HOW much evidence is compiled for or against this new understanding of motivation, it is useless unless it can be practically applied to everyday relations between animals. Since man has been our guinea pig thus far, let me continue with him as an example. If we go back to the cowboys and Indians, we see that when Indian lands and staple food was threatened, the tribes rebelled in an effort to regain their lost security, namely their land and food. When automation threatened the railroad firemen, they rebelled in an effort to retain the security of their jobs. Rejection of a person often causes him to become introverted in an effort to find a corner in life where he can exist without the mocking ridicule of others. A breaking of a feeling of security within a family can cause discontent and, at times, the destruction of said organization.

IN PUTTING MY idea into words, I have to say that security is that element which is sought by all animals in everything they do or say, no matter how minor or inconsequential. This endeavor does not necessarily mean gaining it just for oneself but can be manifest in gaining it for someone else. I add a necessary note of practicability to the theory by saying that if a feeling of insecurity arises, an animal will react in an apparently offensive but actually defensive manner, in an attempt to again feel secure. On this last point an obvious conclusion may be drawn that, to keep an animal contented, don't.
